Best Practice in Public Financial Management to Achieve Excellent Outcomes

Tuesday, 1 October 2019, 9 am–12 Noon
Networking lunch from 12 Noon to 1 pm

Comparison of Korean and Swiss Approaches

The event brings together a panel of experts who will exchange ideas and give their perspectives on issues related to government finance standards and statistics.

DESCRIPTION

Korea and Switzerland are at the forefront of integrated public financial management. Both countries have taken an approach referencing accrual-based government financial reporting (IPSAS) and government finance statistics (GFSM2001) and are using these international standards as a reference. Furthermore, Korea as well as Switzerland have seen the necessity to develop and implement an integrated ERP system, with Korea now moving towards the “next-generation” ERP program. To understand this topic further a panel of experts from the Korea Institute of Public Finance and the ZHAW School of Management and Law (Switzerland) have been brought together to give their perspectives on issues related to financial reporting. This half-day workshop will explore the modernization of public accounting, sustainable financial management, financial governance and planning systems, and government finance statistics.

The event is free of charge.
